CHAPTER ONE

The missing beach ball

"Girls!" called Aunt Paula. "It's time to go!"

"We're coming!" said Sandy.

Maggie and Sandy ran down the stairs in matching pink swimsuits.

"I've packed the bag, so jump in the car." said Aunt Paula.

Sandy and Maggie went outside and got in the car. It was really hot. A perfect day for the beach.

When they got to the beach, Maggie's friend, Elena was waiting for them in the parking lot.

"Hi guys!" she said when When Maggie, Sandy and Aunt Paula got out of the car. Elena was wearing a purple speedo with a skirt and yellow straps.

"Let's go swimming!" said Sandy.

"We can play with my beach ball!" said Elena. "I'll go get it."

Elena came back a few minutes later.

"It's not there!" she said.

"Oh no!" said Maggie. "Where did you have it last?"

"It was on my beach towel." said Elena.

"Maybe someone stole it." said Sandy.

"Are there any footprints leading away from your towel?"

The Missing beachball

"Maybe," said Elena. "Let's go check."

The girls ran over to a group of beach towels under an umbrella.

"This one's mine," said Elena.

"There's little footprints!" exclaimed Maggie.

"They're really tiny."

"There's dog prints too!" said Sandy.

"They're also small."

"So a small person and a small dog must have stolen my beach ball," said Elena.

"But is the person a boy or a girl?"

"I think it's a boy," said Sandy "Cause boys steal things."

"Not all boys steal things, Sandy," said Maggie. "I think it's a girl."

"The dog prints are far apart like a doxen's," Elena pointed out.

"I know a girl with a doxen!" said Maggie. "Her name's Kelly, but she's a grown-up."

"I think we should take a walk and see if we can find some more clues," said Sandy. "But you'll probably have to ask Aunt Paula, Maggie."

"OK," said Maggie. "Mom! Can Sandy and Elena and I go take a walk on the beach?" she yelled.

"Sure, honey!" said Aunt Paula. "But don't too far."

"We won't" said Maggie and the girls started down the beach.

The girls walked some more then they started to rest.

"I haven't seen anyone with a beach ball today," sighed Maggie.

"No wonder" said Elena.

Sandy was quiet for a moment.

She looked around, then exclaimed,

"Look! There's a little girl and a little dog and they're playing with a beachball!"

"Hey! That's Julie!" said Elena. "And that's my beachball!" Elena walked over to the little girl and said, "Julie, please give the beach ball back. It's mine and all my friends want to play with it." Julie looked up at Elena.

"I'm sorry," she said. "I didn't know was your Barbie and we wanted to play with it. Here, Julie handed back the beach ball. Elena took it.

Found

"Hey!" said Sandy. "There's a boy with a dog."

"But the dog's big and the boy's big," said Elena. "So that's not who stole my beach ball."

The girls walked some more. Then, they stopped to rest.

"I haven't seen anyone with a beach ball today," sighed Maggie.

"Me neither," said Elena.

Sandy was quiet for a moment. She looked around, then exclaimed,

"Look! There's a little girl and a little dog and they're playing with a beach ball!"

"Hey! That's Julie!" said Elena. "And that's my beach ball!"

Elena walked over to Julie.

and said, "Julie, please give the beach ball back. It's mine and me and my friends want to play with it." Julie looked up at Elena.

"I'm sorry," she said. "I didn't know it was yours. Barkie and me wanted to play with it. Here." Julie handed back the beach ball. Elena took it.

Found

"Thanks, Julie," said Elena and she walked back to Maggie and Sandy. "You got it back!" exclaimed Sandy. "Cool!" said Maggie.

"I think we took her fun away," said Elena. "Look at her." Julie was sitting with Barkie on the beach, her head hung.

"Maybe we could go play with her," suggested Maggie.

"Yeah!" agreed Sandy.

"Good idea, Maggie!" said Elena. "Let's go!" The girls ran over to Julie and Barkie.

"Julie do you want to play catch with us?" asked Sandy.

"Can Barkie play?" asked Julie.

"Sure," said Sandy. Julie left up.

"I'll play!" she said. The girls played catch. Then, Aunt Paula called them. "Sandy, Maggie! Time to go!" she called.

"That's my mom," Maggie said to Julie and Elena. "We have to go. Come on, Sandy."

The girls ran back to Aunt Paula.
